

Arrest made for PLO murder

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Police on Monday arrested a 26-year-old man in connection with the assassination of the PLO's European coordinator, and hunted for a taxi driver who fled from a police patrol after the murder.

Acting Internal Administration Minister Roberto Carneiro declined to say whether the man arrested Monday was suspected of shooting Issam Sartawi in a crowded hotel lobby at Albufeira, 120 miles from here, or whether he was considered an accomplice to the killing.

"We have strong suspicions that have led us to believe this man is connected with the assassination," said Carneiro, who did not elaborate.

Shooting

Issam Sartawi, a 47-year-old physician who had become a leading PLO advocate of reconciliation with Israel, was shot Sunday while attending the final day of the Socialist International conference in the seaside city of Albufeira.

While some conference delegates and other bystanders looked on in horror, the gunman walked up to Sartawi in the hotel lobby, shot him five times in the chest and head and fled through a nearby park as police shot at him.

Sartawi's personal secretary, Anwar Abu Eishah, was wounded in the thigh in the attack but was recovering well Monday in the Albufeira hospital, a spokesman said. No one else was injured in the attack.

A radical Palestine Liberation Organization splinter group, known as the Abu Nidal faction or the Revolutionary Council of the Fatah, claimed responsibility for killing Sartawi. It denounced him as a "traitor" for his efforts to bring Israelis, Arabs and Palestinians together in peace efforts.

Arrest

Eleven hours after the murder, Carneiro said, police went to a hotel in Lisbon and arrested a man who identified himself as Youssef al-Awad.

Carneiro said al-Awad had entered Portugal last Friday from Spain. He was carrying a Moroccan passport and U.S. dollars that police thought might be forgeries.

"Police are still investigating whether the passport (and money) are false or genuine," said Carneiro.

Al-Awad was to appear Tuesday before magistrates who would rule if there were grounds for holding him.

Seattle man pleads guilty to kidnapping 15-year-old

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Seattle man Monday pleaded guilty in federal court to kidnapping a banker's 15-year-old son and trying to extort $125,000 in ransom.

Ronald Morello, 36, told a U.S. District Judge David Winder that he abducted Steven McKell, son of First Security Bank officer Clair McKell, last January. Winder set sentencing for May after reviewing psychiatric reports stating Morello understood charges against him and was content to participate in his own defense. Morello recently returned from 30-day psychiatric evaluation to his attorney asked for the

Nuclear Agency a joke, witness tells committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a close Senate vote nearing on Kennedy's nomination as nuclear arms control chief, a House subcommittee was told Monday that the agency he would direct has been so "gutted, purged and starved" that it is unable to do its job.

It is not going too far to say that the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency would be an international joke, were it not that the situation is so tragic," Dr. William H. Kincaid, executive director of the Arms Control Association, a non-profit, partisan research group on arms control policy, said in prepared testimony.

The Senate is beginning debate Tuesday and is to vote Thursday on President Reagan's nomination of Adelman, 36, deputy U.S. representative to the United Nations, to succeed the ousted Eugene V. Rostow as the agency's director. Adelman's supporters and opponents both predict a close vote.

The testimony of Kincaid, a former naval intelligence officer and author on arms control issues, was seconded by other former officials of the arms control agency in appearances before the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on international security.

Former agency director Paul C. Warnke, who led the Carter administration's arms control negotiating team with the Soviet Union, said the agency is useless "unless the president and his secretary of state have a genuine interest in arms control."

Bumper crop expected

Weather has not hurt fruit

PROVO (AP) — The state's wet winter and spring apparently hasn't had much effect on fruit trees, and at least one agricultural specialist predicts a larger than usual crop.

Tony Hatch, tree fruit specialist at Utah State University's extension service here, said there's been little damage from the weather to the state's commercial fruit crops.

"As of now, the way the trees are budded up, it should be one of our big years," Hatch said.

Hatch said that although grounds in orchards have been soggy, the state has avoided crop-killing cold.

Winds clocked at up to 104 mph that ripped through northern Utah a week ago also spared most of Utah County's fruit growing areas, he said.

Hatch says the wet weather has helped trees, and should provide an abundant water supply during summer. He said some growers may want a brief frost to thin their crop, or hope for warmer temperatures to prod bees to pollinate blossoms.

Utah's commercial tree fruit crops include sweet cherries, tart cherries, apples and peaches.

Chicago mayoral race to be determined today

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Washington topped at a breakneck pace Monday to shore up support among white liberals, while opponent Bernard Epton coasted to the finish line in the city's most bitter mayoral contest in decades.

Washington, a two-term Democrat congressman who hopes the election Tuesday will make him Chicago's first black mayor, returned Monday to North Side lakefront area where he had rallied with hundreds of white liberal supporters over the weekend.

"I don't like the word battleground, but this is the focus," he said during one of about 10 stops in a hectic campaign day.

He also invited Democratic Mayor Jane M. Byrne and Democratic leaders supporting Epton to join Washington in a unity ceremony after the election. But he warned them they would be working with an "aggressive, progressive mayor." Byrne endorsed Washington immediately after losing the Democratic primary to him, then briefly considered a write-in campaign and has remained silent about him since.

Million dollar computer donated to department

By CAROL JENCKS

Staff Writer

A million computer-aided engineering design and manufacturing processes recently donated by an engineering firm to BYU's Design Technology Department, said Max Raisor, director of the computer-aided design.

The computer equipment, called an integrated graphics system, allows design engineers to plan and develop a product completely by computer.

Working toward integration of manufacturing processes, the department can be carried out from design to the production and marketing stages entirely by computer.

The Design Technology Department coordinates three areas in using this system, said Raisor, department chairman.

These are design technology, manufacturing technology and manufacturing.

Users from all three areas will be on the system. Faculty will also use it to perform projects.

Users of the system BYU has included four work stations.

Users of the system include a computer printer to chart on a screen.

Users of the system include a computer station with a keyboard, a video screen, a program and a menu. The menu is a system.

Staff blames economic ills on sinfulness

By TERRY BAKER

Staff Writer

One way this nation will succeed in ridding itself of economic problems is by not only repenting of sins but of spiritual sins as well, said Ruff on Thursday.

A financial expert, told more than 450 people at high national debt is both immoral and sinful.

Graphic expressions of gospel violations in this country today, said Ruff.

"The country is experiencing many of these because of the people's refusal to listen to principles."

Looking at a national budget deficit of $1 billion dollars this year, he said. If the country obeys the commandment, "thou shalt not kill," this nation's defense budget could be cut in half and the deficit could be reduced by half.

On the cost of dealing with violent crime in this country adds up to billions of dollars each year. "Just keeping that one commandment, thou shalt not kill, would transform this economic situation and virtually eliminate the crime problem."

Violation of the commandment "thou shalt not covet" is another reason this nation is suffering, he said. "One of the major problems in this country is that we're borrowing too much money."

When we covet our neighbor's goods, we invite what our neighbors have. The American has been increasing its standard of living by borrowing, Ruff said.

This nation is afflicted with an inability to post-ponement, he said. "If we did not covet our possessions, we would postpone gratification, thus solve many of our financial problems."

With the social revolution as well, he said, has had an effect on the country's economic situation. "The major social phenomena of our time is the divorce rate. Approximately 60 percent of the country's children are born to single mothers, he said. Even if the mother works, he added, the child in most cases is in care of a day care center, where he loses values from a television or someone else."

Ruff said "the child grows up in an insecure generation that generally can lead a life of crime costing us all."

He said things that I have done is to tell the consequences are in regards to the sins this nation is committing," he said. "The nation has committed these kinds of economic sins, usually in the collapse of the economy."

keyed area sensitive to a $500 electronic pen.

The menu could be called the control of the drawing board screen. Touching certain areas of the menu define instructions to the computer that cause designs to appear on the screen.

With this set-up, Raisor said, the user can utilize tasks already programmed into the computer, or he can create his own uses.

The purpose of the department is to teach students to use the system to its full capacity, Kunzler said. "We want to educate students, not just train them" as users of the system. "Training is the job of trade and technical colleges."

He said students must be able to invent new applications and incorporate ideas, not just operate the equipment.

"We want to give the best possible exposure to the most updated tools, and not just train students so they can get better jobs," Raisor said.

He said the system is a tool to enhance the engineering capabilities, but it is not an end in itself for better employment.

Students who have operated on this computer, however, have an advantage over those who haven't, he said.

There are not many places a student can go to get hands-on experience with these types of systems, Raisor said. BYU students are recognized among the top in the country because they have access to such a system.

Kunzler said few if any institutes have the facilities BYU does.

"Vendors are not inclined to donate to every school, but we have a track record," Raisor said.

The price and size of the system are drawbacks, he said. Typically, however, a company can recover its costs in about two years, and advancements are being made in reducing the size and cost.

Its advantages are tremendous, he said. "It can be calibrated to be accurate to one-millionth of an inch."

A design project can be viewed from any perspective, Raisor said. An engineer can put plans for an entire aircraft on the screen, or he can zoom in on the smallest detail of the total assembly, such as a single rivet.

The computer has three-dimensional capabilities, he said. Touching a few buttons rotates the picture around to another angle.

Also, a model can be viewed in its simplest form or with all the details and intricacies added. This is because the system has "classes."

Raisor said the classes are like the plastic sheets one would use on an overhead projector. Each class contains descriptive information. If only a few classes are "turned on," the picture is much simpler than if all classes are being used.

In addition, Raisor said, colors can be used to distinguish certain classes. He said the system can contain up to 255 classes.

Y professor awarded '83 Fulbright

Dr. Douglas Campbell, a BYU professor of computer science, has been selected as a recipient of a 1983 Fulbright grant, one of the most prestigious awards given to university scholars.

The grant is awarded to scholars interested in lecturing and conducting advanced research in foreign countries.

Campbell will travel to India to lecture at the University of Madras, the India Institute of Technology at Kanpur and Punjab University at Patiala.

He will be in India from June 26 to September 7.

Campbell said receiving the grant "is quite an honor," and he is looking forward to doing research in India.

He will be accompanied by his two sons, Micah, age 14 and Matthew, age 12.

The Fulbright award will pay for Campbell's transportation and give him a nominal stipend for living expenses.

Campbell's sons will accompany him at his own expense because he wanted to take his sons along for the cultural experience.

While in India, he will be lecturing and working with colleagues on research problems in geometric function theory.

The 39-year-old professor received his bachelor's degree from Harvard University and a doctoral degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Sports Masters tournament

Balesteros wins by 4

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - Seve Ballesteros, bolstered by a birdie-early start, took advantage of Tom Watson's three-putt self-destruction and stalked unchallenged to a four-stroke victory Monday in the day-late windup of the 47th Masters golf tournament.

Ballesteros, 26, a Spaniard who twice has declined credentials to play on the American PGA Tour, acquired his third title in golf's Big Four events with a final round 69 and a 280 total, eight strokes under par on the still-wet Augusta National Golf Club course.

Ballesteros, winner of the 1979 British Open and the 1980 Masters, took command immediately with an approach shot to six feet for a first-hole birdie and followed with a wood-club second shot to 10 feet for an eagle-three on the long No. 2 hole.

That put him in front to stay. His playing partner, Tom Watson, once got close with a long putt—perhaps 35 or 40 feet—for an eagle on the eighth. That halved Ballesteros' lead to two strokes.

But Watson, twice a Masters winner and the 1982 U.S. and British Open champion, suddenly fell victim to problems that were, for him, extremely unusual. He calls the phenomena "hammer-mits." His putting touch, among the best in golf, deserted him.

He three-putted three times in a row, and Ballesteros was home safe.

"Ballesteros got off to such a good start, he kind of put a damper on everyone's spirits," said Tom Kite, who birdied the last two holes. Kite, who has yet to win the Masters, never finished fifth or better seven of the past eight years.

"He just blasted us. I'm surprised anyone could do that."

Ben Crenshaw and Kite, former teammates at Texas, tied for second at 254. Neither, however, ever really got in the title chase.

Cougars lose three straight

By RHONDA ZMOOS
Staff Writer

The BYU women's tennis team was out with three strikes over the weekend, with three losses in as many tries at a tough tournament in Austin, Texas.

Thursday the Cougars were blown out of the water 9-0 in the first round by third-ranked Trinity, who boasts the two top-ranked players in the nation. Louise Allen, ranked No. 1 all year, beat BYU senior Tina Holding 6-2, 6-1 in the top singles match.

Cougar freshman Lesley Fox bowed to Trinity's Gretchen Rush 6-3, 6-3 at No. 2 singles. Rush is ranked second in the nation.

"Lesley played extremely well against Rush," said coach Ann Valentine. "Lesley is not as experienced, but she played a comparable game."

"Trinity is a super, super team," Valentine said. "It was awfully windy and that gave us some trouble, although Trinity handled it very nicely."

Senior Marae Pardee split sets with Karen Pearce of Trinity in the No. 6 singles slot for the Cougars' only set victory. The final score was 6-4, 3-6, 6-0.

In the second round, BYU lost to ninth-ranked Berkeley 7-2 Friday. Helen Christensen and Lori Leighton sid by Heather Ettus and Hanna Summerville in three sets for a Cougar win at the No. 3 doubles slot, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6.

Leslie Pearce came up with BYU's other victory at No. 4 singles, beating Stacy Savides of Berkeley 6-4, 5-1. Savides forfeited the match in the second set with a knee injury.

"The wind still seems to bother us," Valentine said, referring to a problem that plagued the Cougars against Trinity. "And we didn't seem to get going until the second set in most of our matches, although Helen, Lori and Leslie Pearce all made some fine efforts."

All other matches were lost in straight sets. Ettus, who defeated Holding 6-0, 6-2 in No. 1 singles, is currently ranked 11th in the nation.

On Saturday, BYU succumbed to 16th-ranked Rollins 8-1. Christensen and Leighton came up with the Cougars' only victory. They romped in the No. 3 doubles slot, 6-2, 6-3.

"We played lots of 3-3 games (games tied at deuce) today," Valentine said. "And we felt good. We put out a good effort today."

Pearce and Karen Mulvehal had the closest singles matches, losing 6-3, 6-4, and 6-4, 6-3 respectively. Holding and Fox knuckled under 6-3, 7-5 in No. 2 doubles.

"Facing three top-10 teams has been a good experience for us," Valentine said. "It gives us a good idea of where we stand."

The Cougars travel to the Ojai Invitational Tournament in southern California April 21. Valentine is planning to take Holding and Fox to compete in singles, and Mulvehal and Pearce to enter the doubles competition.

"I have no excuses," he said. "This is a super golf course but it's just not the course for me."

Lee Trevino, who needs only this elusive title to become the fifth man in history to make a career sweep of the Grand Slam events, struggled to a closing 77 and a 292 total.

Arnold Palmer, the 53-year-old master who gave his aging arm a nostalgic thrill with his first round 68, couldn't keep it going. He struggled over the rolling hills, still wet from the rains that washed out Friday's play and disrupted the tournament schedule, in 75. He played the back in 41 and finished at 296.

Calvin Peete, the only black player in the Masters golf field, used 167 shots in his two final rounds to finish at 309. It was the worst score in the surviving field.

"I guess we'll talk about that later," said Brown. Johnson said later the contract was for four years, at $37,000 a year. Ted Owens, who was fired March 21 after 19 years at Kansas, was making a reported $47,500 in salary, with a television show and basketball camp that pushed his total income past the six-figure mark. Brown is expected to have similar opportunities.

Brown coached the Nets, who already have clinched a spot in the National Basketball Association playoffs, for two years. He also coached two years at UCLA, and has made coaching stops at the professional level in Carolina, Denver and New Jersey. But he said he hopes to put down roots at Kansas, which has the fourth-highest winning percentage among major college programs.

Owens had only four losing seasons in 19, but the last two were consecutive, including this past season's 13-16 record.

Brown opts for Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. AP - Larry Brown has given up the National Basketball Association playoffs, the big city, and an annual salary reported at $200,000 to be head coach at Kansas for $57,000 a year.

"Kansas has an outstanding basketball tradition, and it means a great deal to me to be part of it," Brown, 42, told a packed news conference Friday, one day after resigning as coach of the New Jersey Nets.

"There is no reason why this can't be a great program. I don't think there could be a better situation for me."

When asked the terms of his contract, Brown turned to Athletic Director Monte Johnson and asked, "Would I tell them the truth?" Before Johnson could answer, Brown said he had not discussed the contract terms.

"I guess we'll talk about that later," said Brown. Johnson said later the contract was for four years, at $37,000 a year. Ted Owens, who was fired March 21 after 19 years at Kansas, was making a reported $47,500 in salary, with a television show and basketball camp that pushed his total income past the six-figure mark. Jerry Pimm offered job

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — University of Utah coach Jerry Pimm was interviewed Saturday for the head basketball coaching job at Cal-Santa Barbara, a Salt Lake newspaper reported.

The Salt Lake Tribune, in its Sunday edition, said Pimm was apparently one of two primary candidates for the UCSB post, which became vacant when coach Ed DeLaCay's Pacific Coast Athletic Association squad went 7-20 for its seventh straight losing season.

The other finalist is Kansas University Coach Ted Owens.

Stanley Cup roundup

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With the first-round upsets of Philadelphia and Montreal already achieved by the Rangers and Sabres, five other favorites struggled but advanced in the Stanley Cup playoffs as all the opening rounds were concluded.

The Boston Bruins, New York Islanders, Minnesota North Stars, Calgary Flames and Chicago Black Hawks moved into the National Hockey League quarterfinals Sunday night with tight victories. On Saturday, Edmonton completed a sweep of Winnipeg, the Rangers defeated the Flyers in three games and Buffalo did the same to the Canadians.

Following Boston's 2-1 decision over Quebec, the Islanders 6-3 triumph over Washington, Minnesota's 5-4 overtime verdict against Toronto, Calgary's 4-3 victory in overtime against Vancouver and Chicago's 5-3 win over St. Louis, the second-round matchups were set. Beginning Thursday, it will be Boston-

Buffalo, the Islanders-Rangers, Minnesota-Chicago and Edmonton-Calgary.

In the Bruins 2-1 victory over the Nordiques, Pete Petters, the NHL's best goaltender all season, was outstanding. Quebec outshot Boston 39-15. Petters led the league with a 40-11-9 record, 2.36 goals-against average and eight shutouts.

Against Quebec, he was just as stingy, allowing only eight goals in four games — and only five after the first period of the first game.

On Sunday, he protected Boston's slim 1-0 lead — built on a goal by Barry Pederson only 57 seconds into the contest — until Anton Stastny connected at 3:45 of the third period.

But rookie Luc Dufour beat Daniel Bouchard on a breakaway at 12:02 on Boston's only good scoring chance of the third period, in which the Bruins were outshot 14-4.

In the Black Hawks-Blues game, Chicago grabbed a 2-0 lead, blew it, went ahead 3-2, only to be tied again.

Schlichter stuns Ohio community

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Unearthed the professional football player Art Schlichter, which just 11 months ago was filled with so much mystery.

The Baltimore Colts' reserve quarterback was almost certain punitive action from the National Football League after Schlichter, according to sources and published reports, had bet $389,000 on basketball games the last three months.

Asked what action the NFL might take against Schlichter, league spokesman Roger Goodell replied: "I don't know. We're just investigating the situation at this time."

However, the author of Schlichter's biography, "Straight Arrow," says the player faces a stiff NFL fine.

Schlichter is at stake, Collett said. The league will have to do something. I think he faces a year's suspension, at the minimum. He has been scared, sick, sad."

Schlichter's involvement in the scandal has caused him to leave the team, according to coach Earle Bruce said. In Schlichter's absence, the quarterback had earned 29 victories in 36 games.

Schlichter had been in the FBI in the last season about 1982.

Bloomington, Ohio, the hurt was obvious on Roger Grimm's face.

"Nobody can believe it that something like that would happen," said the 54-year-old barber, who remembers when a youngster named Art Schlichter used to come to him for haircuts.

"I guess it's just a story of a small-town boy that couldn't stand the pressures of all that money."

Schlichter, 22, was identified Friday as the NFL player helping the FBI in a sports gambling probe. He contacted Federal agents after he was pressed for payment by gamblers who threatened to tell the Colts about his gambling.

A federal source in Washington, D.C., has said Schlichter himself is not a target of the probe.

"It was a complete surprise to me," Grimm said Friday from his two-chair shop in Washington Court House, about five miles from Schlichter's hometown of Bloomington.

Grimm pulled out a 1979 magazine article that called Schlichter "The Buckeye's soft-spoken playmaker."

The story portrayed him as a religious, soft-spoken farm boy who was loyal to his hometown. And Schlichter is quoted as saying he'd "probably go back to the country and be a farmer" if he couldn't play football.

In Baltimore, Art Schlichter's friends said he always had a taste for gambling, but said his troubles began when he became a professional football player and had big money to spend.

Franchises to be added to USFL for '84 season

CHICAGO (AP) — United States Football League owners have voted to add as many as 10 franchises to the 12-team league for the 1984 season, scrapping earlier plans to limit the expansion to four teams.

The decision came over the objections of Chicago Blitz coach and part-owner George Allen, who had been threatened with fines by league commissioner Chet Simmons for voicing strident opposition to immediate expansion.

"I would not put any limit on it," Simmons said. "This league could grow by eight or 10 teams very quickly."

Allen, who did not attend the owners' meeting Thursday, said he objected to the mass expansion because he feared he would be forced to break up his team to contribute to an expansion draft pool. But Philadelphia Stars president Carl Peterson called Allen's objections "a little selfish."

"George is a very loud voice, but doesn't get listened to," added Philadelphia owner Myles Tanenbaum.

Blitz majority owner Dr. Ted Diethrich said he favors expansion to increase revenue and national exposure, and added that he has "some innovative ideas for stocking new franchises to keep my coach happy."

The Chicago Tribune quoted a USFL source as saying the league has a list of 10 "priority cities" for expansion: Pittsburgh; Atlanta; Jacksonville, Fla., or Miami; New Orleans; Houston or San Antonio, Texas; Oklahoma City or Tulsa, Okla.; and San Diego.

Other cities under consideration, the newspaper said, are New York, Charlotte, N.C.; Cleveland; Indianapolis; Milwaukee; Kansas City, Mo.; Des Moines, Iowa; Minneapolis; Memphis, Tenn.; Dallas; Anaheim, Calif.; Seattle; St. Louis and Cincinnati.

John Bassett, owner of the Tampa Bay Bandits and chairman of the USFL expansion committee, was assigned by the other owners to investigate the various target cities "as quickly as possible," Simmons said.

"They gave me carte blanche to go out and marry the owners and the cities," Bassett said. "We have had many applications for franchises. Now I have to go out and see if they're for real."

Simmons has seen attendance in his league drop dramatically in the past few weeks.

In Los Angeles, Major league baseball outdrew the USFL, better than 2-to-1 in the first direct same-city confrontation.

The Dodgers drew 29,873 for their game with the Montreal Expos, while the Los Angeles Express drew 18,671 for their USFL game with the Philadelphia Stars at the Coliseum, which seats 90,000.

The sixth weekend of the fledgling United States Football League was billed as the first real test economically for the young league, according to Commissioner Chet Simmons.

Before last weekend's action, Simmons said "I think it's going to be a learning process, starting this weekend," referring to the USFL's first head-to-head battle with baseball for television viewers and the fans' dollar.

Borg says thanks

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Sweden's Bjorn Borg said he was grateful for the hard-fought decision to Jim Connors of the United States, after a decade of star-studded tennis.

Borg, 30, played inspired and perfect tennis in beating the 26-year-old Connors 6-3, 6-4 in the championship of the four-man, $250,000 ATP tournament.

Borg's victory was a bitter-sweet finale for the Wimbledon, six-time open winner. There was a lot of cheering and cheering, and frustration, from the man he had once upon a time the best in the game.

Borg won twice — in 1976 and 1978 against the Swede in the final of Wimbledon. Open, the one major title he won. Borg, and won the Wimbledon U.S. Open crowns last year.

Borg spent much of 1982 on the road.

Borg's 11-center Greg Kite, who coached his career with the team, has been invited to participate in the season action in the 13th Aloha Classic, which begins in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Borg will be joining the West team against Wyoming's Jim Brandon.

Borg's coach, tournament director of the Aloha Classic, extended an invitation to the former player who will leave Monday for Hawaii. The East-West North-sidelines.

"Borg had more pressure on him than I did today," said Connors. "Because it was his last match he wanted it badly."

Borg, who reached the final after an impressive victory Saturday over American John McEnroe, the third member of the triumvirate in tennis in recent years, started badly, losing his first serve on several misplaced shots.

"My game was not consistent," said Borg. "I was hitting with many short balls, and against Jimmy Connors you need good depth on the ball."

In a "farewell ceremony" after the match, Borg said, "In the last 10 years, I really enjoyed myself. I don't regret anything. I was very successful in tennis and hope to be as successful in life in the future."

In Western Athletic Conference play, Kite, a native of Houston, Texas, was second only to San Diego State's Michael Cage in rebounding. He ended his career at BYU with a school record of 208 blocked shots and a game high of eight blocked shots against New Mexico.

Kite also had 347 career rebounds, a figure topped by only two BYU players — Alan Taylor and Kresimir Cosic.

INSULATION FACT #2

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER...

There's more to insulation sales than meets the eye... or the ear. Have you ever thought about how the quality of a contractor's work will influence your success as a salesman? It's an important question. Aside from a good attitude and hard work, nothing else will affect your ultimate success like a contractor's workmanship. But don't take our word for it, listen to the comments of both customer and salesman as we give you Insulation Fact #2:

FACT: CRAFTSMANSHIP AND CUSTOMER SATISFACTION ARE ESSENTIAL TO YOUR SUCCESS AS AN INSULATION SALESMAN.

—LYLE CROUSE, PRODUCTION MANAGER FOR APPLE COMPUTERS, INC.

"As Production Manager for a large, fast-growing company, I'm vitally concerned about quality control. That's why I feel comfortable referring my friends and associates to INSUL-WEST. While I was impressed with their professional, low pressure sales approach, I was even more pleased with the high quality workmanship they displayed while insulating the walls of my home, a job that can often be a homeowner's nightmare."

—ROGER NEUDECK, ENGINEER, EFFICIENT ENERGY SYSTEMS DESIGNER:

"After learning of the tremendous income potential of insulation sales and deciding to become involved, my primary concern was to find a company which had the capacity and expertise to perform work to highly exacting specifications. As an established and recognized member of my community, I need to feel confident that the work I sell, no matter how demanding, will be installed properly. During my past year with INSUL-WEST, this type of craftsmanship has stimulated many customer referrals, proving to be the key to my continued success."

As you consider summer insulation sales this year, don't sell yourself short on quality just to make big bucks. At INSUL-WEST, you'll not only earn the highest commissions available (through working for us direct), you'll also be proud of the work we do for your customers. That's something you can't put a price tag on. Find out how you can become a part of our team; join us for an informative meeting on:

Story-writing teaches foreign language usage

By LORRI CARLSON
Staff Writer

Helping a student communicate effectively in a foreign language is the goal of the language teacher, according to Friday's keynote speaker for the Deseret Language and Linguistics Society Symposium.

John Oller, chairman of the Department of Linguistics at the University of New Mexico, said foreign language teachers can help their students gain language proficiency if the teachers incorporate story-writing principles in their teaching and testing.

"Today's language texts are simply exposing a student to the language, and this simple exposure is not enough. Students must be able to act and put their thoughts into words automatically," Oller said.

Allowing the student to live in the country where the language is used is the most efficient way a student can learn. Because this type of learning is not always available, he said, a teacher must create the experience vicariously.

"Experience guides learning, and sharing the experience gives students the desire to learn."

"What's missing in our texts and classrooms is the transformation of input into intake," he said.

"Following story-writing principles will help create the experience necessary for students to change the input into intake."

The first stage of incorporating story-writing techniques into teaching is to "bridge the relationship between utterances and experiences."

"If a student can see the relationship between a particular situation and the way a native would react to the situation, he will be more apt to learn the utterances necessary to communicate as the native would," he said.

Writing about actual experiences is the second stage.

The experience is organized by grammatical structure, which can be broken down into sentences with a subject, verb, direct object and indirect object.

Therefore, writing about actual experiences helps students learn grammar, he said.

The third element is practicing the language skills in different situations enough to make actions habitual.

"A man will automatically follow things out of experience. If the student can automatically communicate and react properly to a situation because he knows what the situation requires, he is learning," Oller said.

Using the format of an episode is the fourth step in helping students gain language proficiency.

"Any text or classroom activity that will follow story-writing episode techniques will help create intake out of input," Oller said.

Because an episode is in story form, it is easier for students to follow and understand. Thus students can increase their vocabularies through discussing story elements like conflict, theme, plot, characterization and structure, he said.

The episode "begins with a conflict and ends with a resolution. If the conflict does not exist, then there is no reason to think," he said.

Fred C. Adams, founder and director of the Utah Shakespearean Festival, spoke to BYU students as part of the ASBYU-sponsored Shakespeare Week activities. He said Shakespeare is the most widely read author today.

Shakespeare's works timeless, speaker says

By HEIDI PHILLIPS

William Shakespeare was gifted with a touch of genius and is the most widely read author today, said the concluding lecturer for Shakespeare Week on Friday.

Fred C. Adams, founder and director of the Utah Shakespearean Festival, said, "Even the smallest community library will have more books written by William Shakespeare than by any other author."

Shakespeare's works, which have been translated into more than 75 different languages, contain expressions used throughout society today.

Famous sayings used in "Hamlet" are "down the primrose path," "it smells to high heaven," "it's as easy as lying" and "dramatic youth," he said. Those in "Othello" are "green-eyed monster," "pomp and circumstance" and "I'll wear my heart on my sleeve."

"Shakespeare has written about so many different experiences and beautiful moments that are timeless," he said.

Because of the wide vocabulary used, some critics have said Shakespeare could not have done this work because he never graduated from a university. Yet the contemporaries have never questioned his authorship.

In 1845, Mary Cowden Clarke completed her concordance on Shakespeare's plays and found he has used a larger vocabulary than any other author, he said.

The common laborer uses about 300 words in his vocabulary, an educated professor uses about 4,000 words and the most scholarly people in society rarely use more than 10,000 words, Adams said.

"Yet in a study done by Max Muller, Shakespeare used 25,000 words to write his 37 plays, poems and sonnets." Through these words, Shakespeare has touched many people's lives, including Brigham Young, Adams said.

When Brigham Young first came to the Salt Lake Valley, he knew the people would miss the culture and art that they enjoyed in the East. Because of this problem, he helped in the building of the Salt Lake Theater and upon its completion, he spent countless hours there.

Local symphony presents season's final performance

The Utah Valley Symphony will present its final concert for the season in an evening of pops music on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Provo Tabernacle. Pianist JoAnne Slade will be the featured performer.

Slade came from her home in Loma Linda, Calif., to perform the "Gershwin Concerto" in her third appearance with the Utah Valley Symphony.

Slade, who is the daughter of BYU Professor of Music Ralph Laycock, director of the Symphony, was awarded the "Outstanding All-Around Music Major" when she graduated from BYU.

She grew up in Orem and began studying piano at age three with her mother.

Renowned instructors

She later studied with renowned instructors, including Marian Monson and pianist Reid Nibley, a professor of music.

Besides performing, Slade has been musical director at several theaters, including Robert Redford's "Sundance Theater."

Slade recently directed a production of the musical "Oklahoma" in Redlands, Calif., and conducted the opera "Ahnah and the Night Visitors."

Musical teacher

Slade teaches music at the University of Redlands, coaches opera and maintains a private studio. One day prior to the concert, she will present a lecture-demonstration on "The Controversial Gershwin" at noon on Tuesday in the Madsen Recital Hall HFAC.

other four guys, this is ours," said the losing nominees in his acceptance the prize. He was the black performer to win an award following Hattie McDaniel for "The Wind" in 1939 and Sidney "Lilies of the Field" in 1963.

"E.T." picked up awards for original score by John Williams, visual effects, sounds effects and sound.

"Gandhi," captured awards for best original screenplay, best costume design, art direction cinematography and film editing in the nationally televised ceremony from the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion.

Best adapted screenplay was "Missing" by Costa-Gavras and Donald Stewart.

"Up Where We Belong" from "An Officer and a Gentleman," was best song. It has music by Jack Nitzsche and Buffy Sainte-Marie and lyrics by Will Jennings.

Mickey Rooney received an honorary Oscar in recognition of his long career as child star, song-and-dance man and dramatic actor.

"This award is for 60 years of work, they tell me," Rooney said. "It's really only for... fun, for joy."

The award for documentary short subject went to the controversial "If You Love This Planet" by the National Film Board of Canada. Last month, the Justice Department labeled the anti-nuclear film and two others made in Canada as propaganda.

In accepting the award, producer Terri Nash said proudly, "For their tremendous effort in promoting this film, I'd like to thank the U.S. Department of Justice."

The film, which is a showcase of modern technology, was designed to take the theme of robotics out of industry and give it fantasy treatment, Smoot said. "Bob's concept from the start was that this was to be an entertainment rather than just a documentary."

The film attempts to show the beauty and grace of high-tech, industrial robots on an automobile assembly line.

To create that atmosphere, the robots movements were synchronized to classical music recorded by London's Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, and they were bathed in colored lights that gave them life and character.

This was not an easy job, considering the factories where the filming was done were almost always in operation, uncomfortable and usually dangerous, and they were set up for making cars, not films.

"The factories are kind of ugly, but your cinematography is going to make them look like Star Wars," Rogers told Smoot.

According to Smoot, the film, which originated with a series of films done for the Epcot Pavilion in Disneyworld, has been entered in numerous film festivals. It has already won both the Chicago and San Francisco International Film Festivals.

Watt said he still wants Las Vegas singer Wayne Newton to perform on the Mall before the fireworks, but he said the Beach Boys would be invited to perform "as soon as we can get that worked out."

Watt's disclosure that he had substituted Newton and the U.S. Army Blues Band for rock groups on the Mall was made public Wednesday.

By Thursday, after Watt's musical tastes had provoked chatter on radio talk shows across the country, Washing-

Watt was invited to see the president, then sent out to meet the press on the White House lawn for a chorus of mea culpa.

"The president is a friend of the Beach Boys and he likes them, and I'm sure when I get to meet them I'll like them," said Watt.

When Vice President Bush was running for the GOP presidential nomination, the group, known for its "surfin' sound," gave a fundraising performance for him. Their support was considered a coup. The Beach Boys also performed at a youth ball during Reagan's inauguration.

Life is 'boring' for actor after starring in 'E.T.'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Life after "E.T." is "boring," says Henry Thomas, the 11-year-old actor who starred in the hit science-fiction movie. Thomas, who lives in San Antonio, Texas, made the remark Thursday after accepting the Best Young Performer of the Year award during the 26th annual Show-A-Rama motion picture exhibitors convention.

With all the hassles, does he want to remain a star? "Um... well, I don't know," Thomas said.

Oscar's gold skin deep

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Oscar to be presented Monday night is not only one of the most coveted awards in filmdom, it's also a first-rate piece of craftsmanship, according to Tom Mount, whose company makes the golden statuette.

"We may have changed a few items we put into it, but there's not that much to improve on," said Mount, regional manager of Dodge Western, which owns Dodge Trophies and Awards Co.

Oscar's gold is only skin deep. Within is a blend of copper, tin and antimony — known as britannia.

These goods, $35,000 worth, have been recovered by Provo Police and are being kept at the police station awaiting identification by owners.

Stolen goods recovered in Springville

Approximately $35,000 of stolen goods was recovered Sunday from a residence in Springville, according to Lt. Warren Grossbauer of the Provo Police Department.

Moses Hyrum Shepard, 24, who resides at 52 W. 300 North, Springville, was arrested in connection with the stolen property. Formal charges are being sought through the Utah County Attorney's Office.

The property, which is being held by Provo Police while awaiting identification by possible burglary victims, is assumed to have been taken in burglaries from Nephi to Orem, Grossbauer said.

Detectives Keith Teuscher, George Pierpont, and Gary Miner, along with officers Dan Eggen and Steve Guibord, all from the Provo Police Department, made the arrest. They were assisted by members of the Springville Police Department.

Renaissance star for a week

Dance teachers in Elizabethan costume and dueling knights in medieval-style armor battling with bamboo swords were two of the highlights of the Medieval/Renaissance and Shakespeare Week

April 4-9. Two workshops on 15th and 16th century Renaissance dance taught by Dr. Ingrid Brainard, an authority in the academic discipline of historical dance, were given Thursday and Saturday. Teachers dressed in costume, and students were exposed to different types of dance steps.

One major event was Renaissance Night, sponsored by The Society for Creative Anachronism. The Thursday evening activity included sword fights, singing and dancing.

Another highlight of the week was "An Evening of Renaissance Entertainment" on Wednesday. This program included the interlude of the seven deadly sins from Christopher Marlowe's Doctor Faustus.

Sonnets by Francesco Petrarca and excerpts from Ben Jonson's Every Man Out of His Humour were read, and the evening ended with medieval/renaissance songs performed by the audience.

Brainard and Dr. Harrison Powley lectured at the Flea Market of Ideas Thursday. Brainard spoke on the unity and harmony of the art of dance in Elizabethan England, and Powley spoke on "Italian Madrigals of Elizabethan England."

Another highlight of the week was two performances by the Cambridge Court Dancers and Musicians.

The ensemble was founded in 1969 in Massachusetts by Brainard and specializes in the reconstruction and performance of 15th to 17th century court and theater dance.

Personal stress levels vary, professor says in lecture at Y

By WENDY BLASER
Staff Writer

People deal differently with internal and situational pressures that cause stress.

"We all have different thresholds of stress, and it depends how we can cope with it," said Dr. Spencer Condie, a professor of sociology, at a lecture sponsored by the Interpersonal Relations Center.

Some people feel stress is caused by inner turmoil, the internal state of mind or the outcome of a situation, he said. Students face the same external stress in tests and writing papers, but deal with these situations differently.

The responses to stress can be physiological, cognitive/affective and behavioral. The symptoms may include laryngitis, hives and crying.

Each person has roles that need to be juggled. Every day these roles tend to put people in stressful situations.

Role-strain problems arise when the role sets make demands all at once, Condie said.

Mechanisms to aid in the reduction of this role strain include establishing a hierarchy of role obligations, stalling until pressures subside, delegating responsibility, redefining role expectations and establishing a mutual support system.

It is important to determine priorities and compartmentalize roles by location, context and urgency, he said. A "must do" list of priorities to accomplish daily or weekly is also beneficial.

Being able to say "no" is a lesson many people need to learn, he said. "Part of loving oneself is being able to say no and protecting ourselves."

Students can also set up barriers against intrusion, such as going to the library to study or other ways, without being dishonest by making excuses. Another mechanism is legitimate deception, such as conveniently developing a headache.

There are two types of behavior that people have when under stress. A Type A person is tense, and the Type B person is less tense.

Condie said the characteristics of a person with Type A behavior is someone who is always on the move, explosively accentuates various key words, thinks about doing two things simultaneously and utters last words of sentences faster than the beginning of the sentence.

This type of person openly exhibits impatience with the rate at which most events take place, and experiences a chronic sense of urgency. Type A persons also pretend to listen to others, but remain preoccupied with their own thoughts.

These people tend to feel guilty when relaxing or not doing anything for hours or days. They challenge other Type A persons and strive to beat others to be at the top, and count activities in terms of numbers so that they can compare with others.

A Type A person experiences twice as many heart attacks than a Type B person.

A Type B person takes each day at a time, and learns to cope with problems the best they can, he said.

These people seldom suffer from a sense of time urgency and impatience and don't display much hostility. They feel no need to display or discuss accomplishments.

Type B persons are able to relax with no sense of guilt, and can engage in sports for relaxation instead of just competition.

Language the 'key to mind'

Language is the key to the human mind, according to the keynote speaker for the Deseret Language and Linguistics Society Symposium on Thursday.

Derek Bickerton, a professor at the University of Hawaii, feels the mind and its functions can be understood by studying language.

"If we don't understand language, we will not understand the differences between man and other species, and in order to study the language effectively, we must study the origin of language," he said.

Since language is so complicated, one must study and comprehend it at the elementary level before he can begin to understand the complex levels of language.

"A student of language must be like a scientist. A scientist who wants to know about the nervous system does not start his work by studying man; he studies the nervous systems of simple organisms," he said.

No one knows the complete origin of language. The study is difficult because man spoke before he learned to write, so ancient written records are not complete.

The goal of linguists is to understand the built-in capabilities that give man the power of speech. Before this goal can be met, one needs to know the minimum prerequisite of speech and the ways man acquired these prerequisites.

Bickerton believes that "Once we know the answers to these questions, we can effectively trace the origin of language."

Much research needs to be done before all the questions are answered.

County Animal Control Shelter picks up stray dogs and cats until an owner can be found or until the animal is adopted. The animals also receive medical treatment.

animals, she said. The animals are fed and medical problems are taken care of.

But not many animals come in to the shelter needing medical attention, according to Dr. J. Alan Thomas, veterinarian for the Animal Control Shelter. Although Thomas works for Utah State University, the county provides him with a secretary in return for his veterinary services.

Inspections

All animals must be inspected by Thomas before they can be adopted, he said, adding that he inspects three or four animals a week. All dogs that are adopted receive rabies shots.

Any animals that have been in quarantine, such as a dog that has bitten someone, must also be inspected before any action is taken with them, Thomas said.

Rex Murdock, a deputy for the Utah County Sheriff's Office, is in charge of picking up stray animals in the unincorporated areas of Utah County.

Three to four calls are received a day to pick up dogs, but Murdock said he picks up 20 or 30 a month on the average.

Dogs are also dropped off at the shelter by the owner in hopes that someone will take care of them, he said. These dogs are often taken to the shelter.

Cause problems

Some of the dogs are picked up because of complaints that they cause problems with livestock in the area, killing sheep and even cows, Murdock said.

If a dog chases a cow just after she has delivered, it can kill the mother cow as well as the calf, he said.

Murdock said he isn't afraid of getting bitten. "I've been scratched a few times, but it's nothing that a Band-Aid won't handle."

People who live in the unincorporated area have a different attitude about animals than people who live in the city, said Murdock. Residents of the unincorporated area live there because they want room for dogs and livestock, so the county doesn't take as many dogs to the shelter from that area as it does from the cities.

Hard fighting, costumes inspired by 'anachronists'

Medieval costumes and various activities were featured at the Society of Anachronism's annual event on May 1, which was held in the ELWC courtyard.

Donna Crockett, chairman of the event, said: "This society was founded 17 years ago on May 1, 1966 when Diana Paxon held a May Day Tournament in her back yard."

Crockett received her degree in history and decided to teach history.

"Activities that SCA members participate in are the sword fighting, smithing, which is heating metal and pounding it out to make things, and heraldry, or the designing and registration of devices, which are the coat of arms," Duncan said.

Medieval arts include weaving, stained glass, costume, calligraphy and illumination, music, dance, story telling, writing and cooking, he said.

In the sciences there is brewing, herbology, painting, goblet etching and construction of various machinery, Duncan said.

Many people wonder what anachronism means and how it fits into the SCA. An anachronism is something out of its proper time period and a tradition that has outlived its original purpose but survives just because it is a lot of fun.

For some the club is a hobby. For others it's an excuse to pursue interests in history, drama, folklore, or other interests or crafts, she said.

Cheater fooling self, will rose out in end

A two-part series on cheating at BYU that appeared in The Daily Universe last week made it appear as if cheating is wide-spread here. Although the incidence of cheating may be on the rise, it seems that the majority of the student body still follows the injunction of the honor code to be honest in all aspects of life, including test taking.

It is very unfortunate that some of our fellow students feel the need to cheat to do well in a class or to make certain they get a degree. Most of us, however, deserve a pat on the back for resisting the pressure to excel, sometimes at any cost.

Pressure to achieve superiority can come from many sources. Many of us came from schools where we were at the top of the heap. Indeed, to be accepted as a student at BYU required that we excel in our high school studies.

But now we find ourselves among others who were also among the best in their home town and we expect to continue our dominance. Our self-imposed standard of perfection is not realistic and can cause great stress — stress that perhaps prompts some of us to cheat.

We must also deal with parents who cannot understand why their darling children don't get straight A's at BYU when they did at the 500-student high school at home. Some of those parents support their children in school and expect an 'A' return on their investment, no matter how hard the class or how unfamiliar the subject to the student.

Then there's the pressure of graduate school and the threat of not being admitted if one's grades are not up to snuff. We could get ourselves into graduate school by cheating but then find ourselves unqualified to continue our studies because we didn't study properly in the first place.

Yet, in spite of all these pressures, most BYU students undoubtedly remain true to their ideals. They realize that it is more important to be one's best self than to try to best others.

Those who do cheat not only cheat those with whom they compete but do a great disservice to themselves. And, of course, the old stories of not wanting to have a surgeon operate on you who cheated on his medical exams or not appreciating a lawyer defending you in court who cheated to get through law school.

Dishonesty may or may not catch up with someone in this life, but in the end they really end up as losers. They deny themselves the chance to see what they're made of, choosing to cop out instead of meeting the expected level of performance without any personal effort.

Isn't that what's all about — finding out what's inside and then doing our best to make that person we have to live with even better?

Those who cheat deceive themselves and never get a chance to meet the real person inside. Their short-sighted perspective allows the placement of something as trivial as a grade, which won't even matter several years later, over something of real worth — being one's best self.

Utah license plates boring; do something

If local school children are able to lobby state legislators in an attempt to make the bee the official state insect of Utah, somebody ought to persuade politicians about an equally important issue — the Utah license plate for automobiles.

Choosing black and white for the colors of a license plate, which is often viewed as a symbol of state pride, shows a lack of creativity. It's like looking at Baskin-Robbins and ordering vanilla.

If you're a long-term resident of the Beehive State, you realize the current plate — black numbers and letters on a white background — is a major improvement over its predecessor — white numbers and letters on a black plate. Rest assured, Utahns, you're not alone in your embarrassment. Plates that grace the cars from Texas and Maryland are black on white as well. Yet Texans enjoy a small silhouette of the Lone Star state or a black star splitting the trio of letters from the trio of numbers.

Utah plates used to sport a similar object — a beehive — which divided the identifying letters and numbers. But that small element has been slowly phased off the more current plates. There has been one major graphic change made on the most recent Utah plates. The letters composing the word "Utah" are no longer thin and are printed directly on the lower surface of the plate.

Some state residents have frequently called for a change in the graphic design of the plate, including a few attempts to sway the legislature's attention to the matter as well. Bob Lee of KSL Radio conducted an evening call-in show last evening, last month asking listeners to suggest possible slogans that would be appropriate for the Utah license plate.

Lee, who was later contacted in a telephone interview, said some of the suggestions were "Crossroads of the West," "Greatest Snow on Earth," "Art of Living America," and "Utah Says It All."

Lee personally views the Utah plate as "bland" and "mediocre," adding that, "It looks too much like the Salt Flats."

But the slogans and designs found on various state license plates can create much more controversy than what has surfaced here in Utah.

Exploited men of world — uni-

There is a spectre haunting America — it is the spectre of socially-free men. Past resources have been spent on the world of it, but it will not be gone until the men of the world rise up and deery their oppression.

The history of all past societies is the history of class struggle. Master and slave, lord and serf, guild master and journeyman — the oppressor and the oppressed have stood in opposition to each other. In each era, class oppression has erupted into an open struggle ending in a revolutionary reconstruction of society.

Now is the time for the world's female bourgeoisie. Only by waking the world to our oppression can we bring on the revolution and tear down exploitative dating traditions. Though veiled by illusions of affection, the shameless, direct, brutal exploitation of dating is apparent. The world must learn of such injustice.

Two centuries ago, dates consisted of an evening in the parlor conversa-ing, joking and getting acquainted. Dating was an art. The man put his heart and soul into creating a very enjoyable evening. The date was an extension of the man.

With the industrial revolution, men have increasingly had to cope with high-tech dating. This high-tech dating is capital intensive. Dating now consists of driving in a fine car, going to a movie, eating fast food, and listening to the radio. All dates are about the same. The differences between dates with Bob, Mark, or Steve that would have been so obvious long ago are barely discernible in the high-tech world.

The man's identity is lost. After a date to the movies, Ellen essentially has not spent the evening with Bob, she has spent it with Ghandi or E.T. Bob is only identified by the entertainment package that he has purchased for her. He has become a mere commodity in her eyes.

Men are commodified in a competitive market. Since each woman may date several men, even immense amounts of money must be spent to make a final of the date. He squanders and more of his income until he is reduced to utter poverty and moves into a basement apartment south of campus.

As women's desires for more increase, they are able to strangle more and more men. More some victims of dating's greed and a proletarian army emerges from the resources from which we draw dates every night.

Men disdain to conceal their aims. They advocate a free movement against the dating order. Let bourgeois tremble at a dating revolution. Have nothing to lose but their lives. They have a world to win.

DATING MEN OF ALL TRIES — GO DUTCH!

Questions unanswered

Editor: I am distressed, dismayed, and deeply discouraged. I came to BYU in 1978 expecting to find the answers to life's difficult questions. I am now a senior, and the three great questions in life remain unanswered for me:

1. Why does every worm in North America migrate to the Provo sidewalk after a rainstorm?
2. Why is there no sidewalk on 800 North between 200 and 300 East?
3. Where do all the good looking women go at night?

Oh, well. Maybe I'll figure it all out in Grad School.

Jeff Adams, Pleasanton, Calif.

Honor shift

Editor: If cheating is on the "rise" at the university (as stated the article in Friday's paper) then one wonders (and worries) about a cause.

When I was a student at BYU in the late fifties there was a great deal of student pride in the "honor system" which meant that the professor could leave the room during an examination and a student did not cheat. There were, of course, other aspects of university honor, but honesty during an examination was primary, and was the first thing that came to mind when anyone asked about the BYU code of honor.

When I returned as a member of the faculty in 1968 I noticed that a profound change was taking place. Beginning in the late 60s and running through the 70s great emphasis and energy were placed on the "dress and grooming" section of the code of honor; so much emphasis, in fact, that dress and grooming became in many students' minds synonymous with honor itself. As a campus bishop I often interview applicants for admission to the university. In the interview it is my responsibility to determine the prospective student's attitude toward the code of honor. If a bishop in 1968 asked a prospective student if he or she understood the BYU code of honor, the answer the bishop would most likely hear would be: "Yes, a BYU student does not cheat." It has been my recent experience that when I ask that question the first answer I receive from a male student will concern itself with his hair, and from a female student will concern itself with her clothes. Economists tell us that bad money will drive out good. I do not know the cause of rise in cheating. I suspect that like other moral problems there are many causes. But it would be extremely unfortunate and irresponsible on our part if we had allowed our emphasis on a convention to drive out a virtue in which there was a one time such an honest pride.

Gerald N. Davis, Professor of Germanic and Slavic Languages

Pick on ones your size

Editor: There are 11 courts for basketball. We girls wanted to play and like to play. However, when the BYU men's basketball team came in and wanted to play, it seemed everyone bowed down and followed in their footsteps. Why don't they stay up at the Marriott Center and play there instead of coming down and kicking 10 fairly well-skilled female athletes off the court? Please let us play the game against each other and you

"men" pick on someone your own size. Oh yes, if you are going to use the facilities, the least you could do is wear BYU issue.

Sarah Hawkins, Spokane, Wash. and teammates

Grass green over fence

Editor: There is a grave problem looming over our university that must be seriously addressed. The number of students who indiscriminately walk on our campus grass has reached an alarming level, and this practice must be stopped immediately. The following appropriate suggestions may be used well to solve this relentless problem forever.

One solution could be the complete removal of lawns from the university premises. The soil could be sold at a good profit and the revenues used to purchase concrete to replace all lawn areas. Not only would this drastically reduce the summer water bill but also provide plenty of easy access parking to all campus buildings. Moreover, the austerity of the concrete would discourage slothful students from missing class on warm days when they usually waste precious time by lounging on the lawns.

Another consideration could be the erecting of electric fences around all university lawns. These fences would preferably be 12 feet high cyclone-type, topped with coiled barbed wire. Such fencing has proved an effective deterrent at such places as Hogle Zoo and the Utah State Prison and could be as effectively used here.

However, if serious offenders still persist, guard towers could be raised at strategic positions throughout campus, fully equipped with machine guns and manned with highly trained sharpshooters. The only possible drawback from this arrangement might be expense; if this is the case, survivors could be heavily fined for their attempts to cross the lawns.

This free-and-easy attitude and disrespect for authority must be stopped with an iron fist. Some church and university leaders have tried to teach that honesty in small matters is the soul of integrity, but we can expect that only a few of our students would ever accept and follow such teachings; so we must act by force. If we don't move forward quickly, many students will whine and complain that their tuition is raised to cover such costs as damaged lawns. We must take the freedom of walking on lawns away from school kids and give it to the right to do whatever they please, without consideration of the long-term effects on themselves and others. By implementing these wise measures, we can bring this indiscriminate practice to an abrupt halt.

Michael Fitzgerald, Orem

Practice OK

Editor: Another change in the GE program (health)? And again the conscience of someone is aching due to the repetition of material. Of course, the student from Delta Junction, Ala., whooping in health would think the fundamental health course is not worth while for her.

If repetition is so unbearably high not go all the way? Shouldn't high school chemistry count as chemistry 100? Or high school biology for biology 100? And high school algebra for math 100? And math 100? And about the term paper I wrote in high school? Shouldn't my term paper forego my category III English re-

It's been a struggle, but fun— Goodbye

I'm graduating. I can't believe it. I never thought I'd be able to figure out the G.E. program, let alone complete the requirements. I survived North Pole winters, grueling apartment check-outs, embarrassing creative dates and Physical Science 100.

I know how to use the Harold B. Lee Library, know where my academic advisement center is located and know where to park without a sticker and get away with it. I managed to keep abreast of an ever-changing ticket distribution policy which made me camp out for tickets, buy tickets from ruthless scalpers and accept dates I didn't want just to see the game.

I remember waving colored posters around in the stunt car section in a small football stadium overflowing with vivid fans.

I remember campus before the Kimball Tower, Tanner Building and Conference Center were built. . . . When ASBYU offices looked like a giant garage sale and the Cougararet only sold quickie burgers and french fries.

It was here when the first Star Wars movie came out and The Star Place opened for business.

I haven't been here forever, but four and a half years didn't just fly by either.

Perhaps I'm proudest of the fact that I missed being part of the antics about women who drop out during their first two years of college. I never complete their degree.

At the same time, I tell myself that it is possible for me to find husband in Japan, in Paris or Okla. and because I'm graduating, I needn't give up on me. And if suffering from a trip into nostalgia it's only because I look at fresh and feel positively "aged."

I'll admit, I sometimes wonder where "Life after BYU" it's comfortable; it's been safe.

People here care about each other, something that seems to be scarce in our world. Yet, I know meet good people where ever LDS church members and members alike.

As I spend time typing up real and interviewing for jobs I realize about to enter the big time now. I received a good education. My rents and my teachers have done they can. It's up to me now. As I look back what it took to achieve goal, I know it will be to say go to BYU, "Y" mountain and Utah ever because I will always appreciate and cherish the memories to here.

— Torri La

For example, some Okla. are questioning the committee their plates' slogan: "Okla. OK." They are promoting a change the phrase, some say, means mediocre or average.

Some Colorado drivers who overheard about nine or to ago when the state plates have traditionally sported a white mountain design for the slogan orful Colorado. "A few ex went as far as to stencil mountains on their plates."

Somebody from Utah has seen adding the beehive — thing else, for that matter — Utah plates. Either the license if they drive a car with like license plates, or they apathetic to do anything about.

Or perhaps they, like those sign the plates, lack the creativity to think up a clever design scheme, phrase or slogan that enhance the front and back of Utah cars.

amounts of money must be spent to make a final of the date. He squanders and more of his income until he is reduced to utter poverty and moves into a basement apartment south of campus.

As women's desires for more increase, they are able to strangle more and more men. More some victims of dating's greed and a proletarian army emerges from the resources from which we draw dates every night.

Men disdain to conceal their aims. They advocate a free movement against the dating order. Let bourgeois tremble at a dating revolution. Have nothing to lose but their lives. They have a world to win.

DATING MEN OF ALL TRIES — GO DUTCH!

despised the opponent or else. If this was not the case, perhaps a final of the position should be allowed so students would vote for the right or not at all.

By the way, how nice it was my teachers believed in total and would hold a post-final post-post final and a post-final, and . . . rather than the results of my first final. But students must realize that means final. Or does it?

Golden rule

Editor: I've read a lot of letters to your during my stay here, and it seems there is a general rebuttal letters need to be the "final" two candidates in the discussion of import through the editorial page be much more tactful. I will type a few examples by cause then I could justified let a hypocrite. However, cases when, even though I have and I will send here. In many of the trivial gripes written. Wouldn't our letters have greater impact if we served them for express most important ideas?

That's final

Editor: It was not more than two or three weeks ago that the "final" bulletin board was set up for each office were tabulated and the "final" winner was announced. Finally, everyone could relax — both the candidates and the concerned voters.

However, it was not long before the "final" outcome for one particular office was not final at all. (At least by the court "final" decision.) The "final" two candidates for the "final" elections for this office — or should it be called final of the final election or perhaps post-final election?

If Friday's election is in fact the "final" outcome, the students will be happy because elections are finally over, candidates will be happy, and I will be happy because I finally have a successor. However, what concerns me most is that those final X's on the ballot represent decisions based on what one candidate would contribute to ASBYU over the other and were not made to show how much they
